

PREPARATIONS ARE REVIEWED

"Pershing's Crusaders," Wonderful Picture, Depicts America's Progress.

SPECTACULAR OFFERING

Men in Service Are Shown Enjoying Life in France.

The magnitude of a year's work of the United States government in preparation for the war is reviewed in a most graphic way in "Pershing's Crusaders," an official moving picture...

The picture shows the intensive training of the United States soldiers, as well as the sailors, the work which is carried on at the shipyards, ammunition factories; the building of the cantonments, the tailor shops of the United States army and the huge bakeries. After the preparation which has been in progress in the United States for the past year is shown, the rest of the picture is devoted to what the Sammie is doing in France...

One of the big features of the film is the showing of the first Hun captured by the American boys and how they were each interviewed for valuable military information. Among these prisoners were two officers, who turned their backs to the camera when the pictures were taken. However, after they had evidently been persuaded to give the people in America a chance to see their faces they turned and faced the camera for a short time.

Baptizing Soldiers. American soldiers baptized in a wagon from one of the French streets, just before they took their departure for the front line trenches, was shown. This was the first baptism of United States soldiers in France.

Feeding of Sammies. Five hundred thousand loaves of bread, which are turned out daily from one of the government bakeries, was shown. Another film was shown of the boys in France lined up and receiving their daily rations. "Army beans" have evidently not been excluded from the army, for they were pictured in large quantities.

When the play was reviewed at the Alcazar Monday morning those in the audience cheered for the boys as they were shown passing through the streets of Paris, with little Frenchurching running after them, on their way to the front just the same almost as if they were passing along on Market street. All during the play the spirit of patriotism manifested was great.

WOMAN'S WAR WORK

(By Winona Wilcox.)

With the proposal that congress increase the draft age from 19 to 40 comes a new preparedness problem for industry: Are the women ready to do the work of all the men required for America's greater army?

Doctobles they have the "enthusiasm" of the American woman to back up the American soldier. But often they have blurred notions of the best thing to do for the war and temporary employment attract them. In the present hustle of business women are being urged to take on a new demand in made upon them for work outside the home to review conditions and to shape the new army for home defense along selective service lines.

First of all, who is eligible for war work? de chine, worn with picture hat. She carried an arm bouquet of pink asters. Mrs. Jones is a graduate of Chattanooga High school. She is considered one of North Chattanooga's most popular and efficient young ladies.

JUNIOR HIGH RED CROSS WORKROOM COMPLETED

Formal Opening of Auxiliary Headquarters at East Side High School.

The workrooms of the Junior High Red Cross auxiliary have been completely furnished and will be formally opened Wednesday morning, Aug. 21. All women of Highland Park, Ridge-dale and Oak Grove are asked to come and sew. This auxiliary has given a number of entertainments, the proceeds being used to buy equipment for the workrooms. The treasurer reports over $200 on hand, and this will be used to purchase material for hospital garments.

Several months ago the women of the community organized a Red Cross circle, but through the untiring effort of Mrs. J. H. O'Rear, Mrs. Fox, Mrs. H. C. Ludlow and Mrs. Mary Martin, the circle has become self-supporting, and will hereafter be known as an auxiliary. The workrooms will be open every day.

BOAT EXCURSION SUNDAY WAS SPLENDID SUCCESS

"Chattanooga" Carries Record-Breaking Crowd Up Tennessee River.

When "The Chattanooga" left the Market street landing Sunday afternoon, the boat carried with it for a twenty-five mile ride up the river some of the finest scenery in the country. Many of the young men, who are in training at Chickamauga Park, from the northern and eastern states, were heard to say that they had been on trips by boat in their section of the country, but that they had never been on one before this. The scenery along the river, which is made between the mountains.

CHARLEY HAJOS WRITES THAT HE IS RECOVERING

High Explosive Shell Sent Him to the Hospital With Severe Injuries.

Charley Hajos, a young Chattanooga marine, who was recently wounded in action "over there," has written William Smith, circuit court clerk, that he expects to be out of the hospital real soon. He explained that he was injured by a high explosive shell. He said the hours pass slow in the hospital, and he was trying to write a letter to his friends. He sent his regards to Judge Martin Fleming, and the judge's children, little Mary Louise and Martin Fleming, Jr. He also urged that he be remembered to his friends in Chattanooga.

COLORED BAPTIST WOMEN NAME OFFICERS FOR YEAR

Mattie M. Young was re-elected president of the women's auxiliary of the colored Baptist association, which has been in session at the Second Baptist church. The other officers elected were: Alle Gibbs, first vice-president; Katie Madlock, second vice-president; Mattie

Lewis, third vice-president; Callie Brasler, recording secretary; Luella Clark, corresponding secretary; Alle Sietz, treasurer, and Sarah Marby, district organizer. The officers were installed by Mrs. N. L. Bishop (white), a city missionary. William Brooks acted as master of ceremonies. A feature of the convention was the program of the children. Papers were read by Mrs. William Smith and Mrs. Julia Hunt. "Christ is the Captain of Our Salvation" was the subject of a sermon delivered by Rev. G. T. Speaks, Mrs. J. J. McElroy, of South Pittsburg, secretary of the women's state Baptist convention, also delivered an address. Music was rendered by the choir of Mt. Paran Baptist church, and the pastor of this church, Rev. D. W. Bloodworth, preached an educational sermon. Among those who offered words of encouragement were Rev. William Johnson, Prof. J. W. Carter, Rev. H. J. Johnson, H. Langston, Rev. J. K. Kennedy, R. S. Ransaw, Rev. J. W. Wood.

The soldier himself hints the answer in his song favorite, "Keep the Home Fires Burning." Only those women are properly released for war work who have no homes to keep or nothing to keep them on, no babies to raise, no old people to watch over.

The highest rank in the woman's army belongs to the home makers. That she should take care of herself while he fights the Hun is not enough. His greatest need is that she should keep up a home for him to come back to.

This should be sharply defined in the mind of every woman before she undertakes war work outside of the home.
